

I would like to let you know how I do not want the current IN Law to be preempted by your FCC ruling regarding no call lists. I am VERY happy with the current IN law that is keeping me from getting bombarded with telemarketers all throughout my day. IN the past I would get up to 6 calls a day..for a month I had an issue where I filed a complaint with the phone company because as my number was auto dialing by the computer at one of the telemarketing facilities the computer would not hang up the phone after I picked up the receiver. So instead of getting the "typical" pause, once the dial up switches from computer to the actual telemarketer, I would get NOTHING and I could not use my phone until the computer would hang up. This went on for a month..same time everyday. The call could not be traced back to a phone number and the phone co. said there was nothing they could do to stop the calling since it came from a random computer program. PLEASE spare me the aggravation of these daily calls. Leave the IN LAW alone !!
